With the recent announcement that the state of New York will be taking the lead to provide menstrual products to female students free of charge, it's time to be prepared to supply this need.

“Period poverty” is when menstruating women are unable to afford basic sanitary products that help mitigate period symptoms and manage bleeding. According to experts, period poverty impacts millions of people in the United States and around the world, especially poor women and marginalized communities. By making hygiene products available to all, low-income families can be assured that their needs will be taken care of*.

Impact and its partners have developed this guide to pertinent articles and products that can help you be prepared for these changes that are just around the corner.

115TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSION

H. R. 972

A BILL

To increase the availability and affordability of menstrual hygiene products for women and girls with limited access, and for other purposes.

New York is also eliminating the so-called “tampon-tax” which added 4 to 10 percent to the products price.

“Menstrual products are as necessary as toilet paper and soap, but can be one expense too many for struggling families.”

New York Governor Andrew Cuomo
